RSB Governance

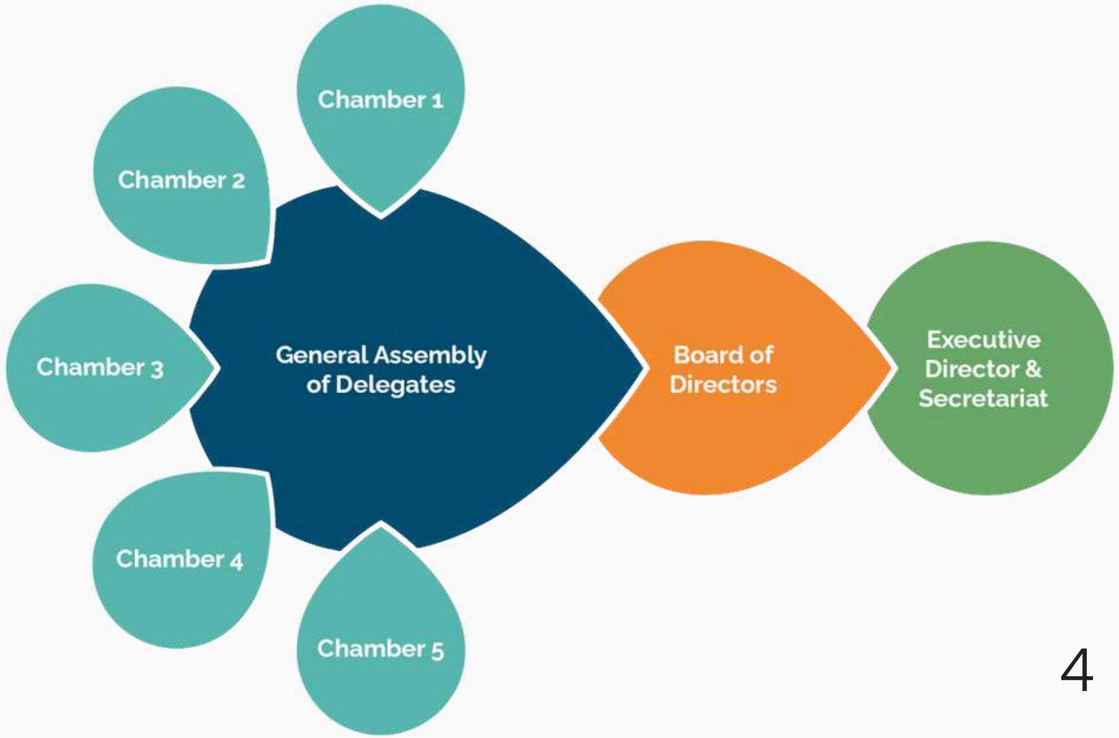

RSB is built on a foundation of transparency, inclusivity, and collaboration. Our multi-stakeholder governance model ensures that diverse voices—from businesses and investors to NGOs, governments, and academia—are represented in shaping the standards and policies that drive the bio-based and circular economy forward.

THE FIVE-CHAMBER SYSTEM

To maintain a balance between business interests and civil society, RSB members are organised into five Chambers:

1. Chamber 1: Producers & Processors
2. Chamber 2: Markets, Finance & Industry Adoption
3. Chamber 3: Social Equity, Livelihoods & Human Rights
4. Chamber 4: Environmental Stewardship
5. Chamber 5: Government, Policy and Research

Each chamber ensures equitable representation in decision-making, fostering a governance model that is both fair and effective.

🔎 ALIGN WITH A GLOBALLY RECOGNISED SUSTAINABILITY LEADER

🔎 DEMONSTRATE LEADERSHIP AND COMMITMENT TO SUSTAINABILITY

A truly credible and practical sustainability framework

RSB members play a critical role in shaping sustainability standards through a consensus-driven, multi-stakeholder process that ensures credibility and prevents dominance by any single interest. By engaging, members influence critical decisions, contribute to continuous improvement, and gain access to global expertise, ensuring standards remain innovative, effective, and aligned with best practices.

Research from Germany's oldest eco label, Blauer Engel (Blue Angel), which covers over 10,000 products across 80 categories, found that RSB is the only certification system for biomass that fulfil their own rigorous requirements to be recognised under their own approach – without any constraints or additional requirements.

WHAT OUR MEMBERS SAY

RSB members are at the forefront of building a just and sustainable bio-based and circular economy. Their insights and experiences highlight the impact of RSB membership in advancing responsible innovation, collaboration, and leadership in sustainability.

'Procter & Gamble is very pleased to become a member of RSB. As a company, our long-term vision is to use 100% renewable or recycled materials for our products and packaging. As we move to replace petroleum-based materials with renewable ones, sustainable sourcing will be key to ensuring our products are truly renewable for generations to come. Partnering with RSB will help us to maintain the highest standards of sustainable sourcing as we embark on this journey.'

VIRGINIE HELIAS, VP SUSTAINABILITY, PROCTER & GAMBLE

'The Roundtable on Sustainable Biomaterials' rigorous sustainability criteria are the reason we have chosen to work with them in South Africa, to ensure that the development of aviation biofuel feedstocks safeguards against potential impacts on the environment and provides maximum community benefits.'

JAMES REELER, LAND AND CLIMATE CHANGE SPECIALIST, WWF SOUTH AFRICA

'GE Aviation is excited to join RSB, which is helping enable the aviation industry's transition to lower-carbon sustainable aviation fuel in place of fossil-based jet fuels. We are committed to a more sustainable future of flight and look forward to working with RSB to support policies that encourage broader adoption of SAF while ensuring fuels are sourced responsibly.'

ALLEN PAXSON, VICE PRESIDENT OF COMMERCIAL PROGRAM STRATEGY, GE AVIATION

DUES ADJUSTMENT OPPORTUNITIES

RSB offers several options to help organisations manage their membership costs:

Offsets: Members can offset up to 50% of their fees through fully documented contributions, such as hosting RSB meetings or site visits, or providing in-kind support for RSB initiatives.

Waivers: Available for Chamber 1 and 2 members experiencing temporary financial hardship, as well as non-academic institutions in Chamber 5, based on in-kind contributions.

Mutual Membership: Considered on a case-by-case basis where relevant.

Startup Discount: Organisations in Bands 1 and 2 within their first three years of operation receive a 70% fee reduction, provided they register and participate in at least one RSB platform or initiative annually.
